ANGELICAN CHURCH CONFERENCE.

The general Conference of the Bishops and Clerical and Lay representatives of the Church of England in the Province of Australia met yesterday (after Divine service at St. James') at half past 10 o'clock. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION OF THE YOUNG.
The Rev. JOHN SHAW gave notice of a motion having reference to the religious instruction of the young. The President said he hoped it would be in his mind what was the object for which the Conference had been assembled. He thought that the object was to consider the religious instruction of the young.

they do not hold; but it is a far more desirable state of mind toward the ultimate object of all true religion, as infinitely more important than the mere question of dogma, and while entertaining a distinct and strong preference for systems, deliberately refused to look on with good-will while several Churches seek in their own way to promote the honour of God, and the welfare of mankind. The people of SYDNEY must have felt indeed considerable anxiety in opening this Conference, united with lively satisfaction, which mixed with every plantation which all must feel when in sight of the great object. The desire accomplished is sweet, and hope this enjoyment is in reserve in reference to every just aspiration. The prudence and zeal which have distinguished the administration of the Bishop of SYDNEY have earned him the gratitude of his people.

by the general stimulus given by the adventure to the commerce of the country. The revenue for the quarter amounted to £30,129. As compared with last quarter, there are decreases in some lines; but the amount of them is only a little over £100. After allowing for these, there is an increase on the quarter, as compared with the corresponding quarter of the previous year, of £220,000.

advance is in spirits, and is greater the advance in all the other lines put together, leaving out of account the ad valorem duty. The spirit duty for the quarter 1897,470; the ad valorem duty, £48,763. The advance in the former case on the period compared being £16,637, and in the latter only £30. When we consider the number of persons subject to ad valorem duty, how largely they enter into household consumption and comfort and little luxuries to women and children, it certainly is not flattering to that the consumption of these articles has less stimulated than the consumption of spirits. The first and most notable result of a more general spending in the community is that more money is spent in grog. The ad valorem is, however, considerably more progressive than at the beginning of the year anticipated. When the last change in the tariff was made, and many articles of the list were removed into the category of specific duties, it was not con-and that the ad valorem list could be upon for much more than about £100,000; but, at the rate of the last year, it would yield about £187,000. Murray Customs for the quarter amounted to £26,849, which is an advance of £1 on the corresponding quarter of the previous year. To some extent we have here a contrast between actual collection and the estimate under the old treaty; but the normal volume of the Border trade has been so disturbed by the war that the expectation that the duties would soon be levied, that we can hardly any reliable conclusion from the results. The duty directly derivable from the mint has only increased by £1075; the mint and escort fees for the quarter yielding £2450. The Mint receipts are less by £745 than last year. In the face of an increased production of gold this may seem strange, but it must be remembered that the Victorian mint is now open, and as a competitor in the coining business has secured a large quantity of New Zealand gold that used formerly to come to Sydney.

was to be expected, it is in the land use that the greatest advance is observable. Here there are one or two diminutions, quit rents being less, the assessment on houses, and the rent of land within first-class districts less; but the total diminution is only £2000, while the gross increase is not less than £155,857. The land revenue for the quarter has amounted altogether to £509. The amount paid for mineral rights during the quarter is £81,547, and is very nearly £80,000 more than

third quarter of last year. This sum of £112,251 includes new leases and the rent paid in the broken period. Some of this amount will doubtless be paid in excess, and will have to be refunded; but after having made a reasonable deduction on this score, we shall have a handsome sum received by the Government for the use of its mineral lands. The amount for land sales is £112,251, and this is about £60,000 in excess of the same year's similar quarter. Under this head is included the result of sales by the Government of conditional purchases, and the latter covers mineral as well as agricultural selections, the gross total has been given by payments on mining account, which we are not able to say to what extent. The leases of auriferous lands sold for the quarter £6680. In the similar quarter of the previous year the amount paid only £457. The speculation in tin and silver has done much more to enrich the country than the speculation in gold; whether it will do more to enrich the speculators remains to be seen. The Post Office and the graph Office have of course both partaken of the increase of business. In the former receipts have increased by £4274, and in the latter by £2569. The railways have gained an additional revenue to the amount of £16,656, and the post quarterly receipt being over £100,000. The activity in the share market has naturally increased the demand for stamps, and the gain in revenue has been £4741. The balance of the account as the income of the quarter has the outgoings have been greater; and the TREASURER has received £730,129, and paid away $832,697. At first sight it seems, therefore, as if the revenue ought the better for our prosperity, and there was a hole in the bottom of the treasury chest bigger than the slit in the bottom. But in explanation of the large amount paid away, we must point out the half-yearly interest on the public debt, which represents the liabilities of two years is concentrated in one. The money is paid in London on the 1st of January, and to secure of its being there in time it is sent by the Bank of England.

 sum of £231,637. In addition to this heavy sum the Treasury chest additional funds to be sent to pay off two sets of debentures fell due at the end of this year, and amounting conjointly to £26,700. Altogether, therefore, the remittance to London has ab-sided very nearly £300,000.

This explanation will account for the fact that the Consolidated Revenue fund is more heavily drawn at the end of the quarter than it was at the beginning of the quarter, and is, in this the commencement, because it is the fund that has to bear the and hence have arisen the various cycles of the notion, dear to the Bishop of Exeter, of the whole human race in a gigantic man, and all the phases of human existence in it. And there seems to be no reason for these aggregations; they may be added or fossilized, but they can recover no more, except by such fusion with an external element which destroys their identity. The British sense of fair play has been the true backbone of the German honesty and steadiness of German thriving. On the other hand defect of moral element has always been with weakness, failure, or misfortune, Spain in the seventeenth century, and Italy which has befallen France from the fall of the Commune of 1871. And the heroisms of the American Revolution have been followed by success often much greater than has been expected from the relative strength of the victors. In spite of all this there are no heroes in the American Revolution except Thermopylae and Marathon, Merganser, N. Grey and Agincourt, Holland's victory independent in defiance both of Spain and France, all his historical greatness and glory which they came from. We are not enough to maintain that virtue always prevails; the handful of heroes must always bear down the mass of braves, but we should think that the victor virtues are

The year, and in any weather; and further, it will keep perfectly good for ten years if the process is not taken to do more than it is intended to do. It does not occupy more than two hours. Those who have tasted these meats have found them to be as good as the best, and to have an excellent flavor. It is the intention of Mr. Lemaire to form a company in Beechworth to work his new kind of stuf. It is his intention to sell the meats to the public, and he also proposes to send samples to London. The country is concerned in this, and it may be as a luxury than as an object article of diet. The country where the process of meat is so easily and so well carried out.

THE DEEP SEA.—The Ovens and Murray fish describe some meats preserved by the high gain of salt, and the Wentworth and London meats are altogether distinct from what is known as preserved meats, needing no salt, and, for any similar purpose, it is hoped that they are preferred to give to the development Mr. Lemaire has devoted several years, and this process can be successfully carried out all the year, and is not injurious, and, in fact, the process is not akin to that adopted in the case of hams and bacon, as it does not occupy more than 24 hours. Those who have tasted the meats know to have an excellent flavor, and to be of special diet. It is, we believe, Mr. Lemaire's first company in Southwark, and he also proposes to have a second company in London. As a company is concerned, these meats must be sold as a luxury than as a cheap article of diet, and, therefore, where the price of meat is so high, and proved to be healthy.

The successful experiments in the determination of the specific gravity of sea-water have been made by the agency of this apparatus.
